

PC-Description

CANS is a notification system for online communities that is designed around the importance of a user's social context and personal notification preferences. It was built using the principles of Fitzpatrick's Loci Framework, Dourish's concept of embodied interaction, and a review of existing collaborative environments. (See also <http://cansaware.com/>.)